

FAA Production Studio News

April 2004

Sun 'n Fun 2004

By Cheryl DeFilippo & Hugh Hardy

FAA Production Studio Staff

Photo's Courtesy Bob Nocero and Bill Hoenstine

The months of preparation and hard work that went into getting the FAA Production Studio's ready for Sun 'n Fun has come to a close. Excellent programs and speakers were spotlighted throughout the week and the crew was challenged to make every production appear flawless and well rehearsed.

Sincere thanks go to our Production Crew members who dedicated hundreds of hours prior to, during and post Sun 'n Fun. Your hard work and the professionalism you exhibit have not gone unnoticed. Special thanks go out to John Carter and Steve Graff who worked long hours during the event, to pull a "rabbit out of the hat", creating an entirely new production of the "Who Wants to be an Aireman" program.

This age of digital communication is wonderful. We have created a society that revolves around an incredible amount of technology that makes better use of our time, allows us to handle larger work loads and communicate via a variety of modern ways.

The FAA Production Studios has come into this incredible age with live and prerecorded satellite broadcasts as well as live and prerecorded streaming video.

Though these modern tools are extremely valuable in our day to day lives they can not replace the value of a "face to face" presentation that allows the audience the opportunity to see and hear a presenter, ask questions, and interact. We are pleased that our aviation public still packs the studios for these informative learning experiences.

First class speakers premiered every day at the studio..... John and Martha King, Diego Alfonso, Janeen Kochan, Walt Schamel, Greg Rolle, Phil Lockwood, Mark Grady and Cary Mendelsohn were just a few of our presenters.

Ben Coleman, host of "Plane Time", interviewed aviation celebrities on the roof top of the Production Studio throughout the week.

Enjoy the photo's of Sun 'n Fun 2004... and we look forward to seeing you at the studio!

